

I am distressed to find that there is a possibility of radio programming rules that could exclude K-LOVE from the radio! K-LOVE provides a unique and vital service that I have very little confidence any other programming could fulfill. Since discovering the radio station I have been so impressed with it's wholesome and inspiring messages that I have made my own financial pledge to it. And the music is only a part of what makes it so worth while. The multitude of resources that are advertised for strengthening marriages and families are invaluable to people who are seeking to be good people and have rich, fulfilling, and righteous lives--which, in truth, we all should be seeking.

I fear that were K-LOVE be nudged off the air to make way for other programming, that programming could very well be more of what there is already enough off on public radio. And it is not as enriching or community-building as K-LOVE.

I would encourage you, who are responsible for making this decision, to make the choice to allow wholesome, family and citizen- friendly radio to continue being able to broadcast across a nation that is thirsting for that which is good.

Sincerely, Adrian Van Wagoner
